Craig Antico, left, and Jerry Ashton of RIP Medical Debt, have started a campaign to expunge medical debt. / BESS ADLER, METRO

These guys want to help pay your medical bills

Debt. Jerry Ashton and Craig Antico want to help people get out of it.

Claire Elyse LaRoche had "excellent insurance" last year.

But when LaRoche, who has a congenital heart defect began having other health issues last year, she found herself responsible for paying the majority of the tab for nearly weekly appointments and tests with specialists that cost thousands of dollars.

LaRoche, 28, has whittled down her medical debt to about $2,500 since then, but has relied on family members and credit cards to foot the bills.

"I graduated [from college] in a recession. ... They really hound you. I just got sick of the calls and ended up charging it," said LaRoche, who works part-time at a national health nonprofit and runs a marketing and events blog.

LaRoche said she has new insurance this year that isn't as great, and she "thinks twice about going to doctors" and often waits to see if symptoms go away before booking an appointment.

"I really don't want to take on any additional debt," LaRoche said.

Last year, 64 million Americans had difficulty paying their medical debt, according to a report by the Commonwealth Fund, down from 75 million in 2012 and 73 million in 2010.

Jerry Ashton and Craig Antico think they can put a dent in America's medical debt crisis, and want to help those who really need to pay their bills, no strings attached.

At face value, Ashton and Antico are perhaps unlikely advocates for those who owe medical bills. They have decades of experience as medical debt collectors.

They recently launched RIP Medical Debt, a nonprofit, and accompanying initial crowdfunding campaign to raise $74,500 to purchase and absolve strangers' medical debt.

The goal for the first year is to raise $14 million, purchase $1 billion of medical debt and abolish it. They get more bang for their buck because debt collectors can buy medical debt for a fraction of the price, then aggressively go after the person who owes it for the total amount.

"What is it about me and Craig that makes us perverse in our industry?" Ashton jokes. "We want to go in there and we want to buy that debt for pennies on the dollar, the difference is when we get that debt, we then put a stake through its heart."

The organizers believe they are the only organization in the world trying to eradicate medical debt.

David Baril / NYPD

Charged. Alleged NYC hammer attacker arrested for assault

David Baril, the man accused of attacking a police officer and at least four other people with a hammer this week, was arrested on felony assault charges Thursday morning.

Baril, 30, was arrested at Bellevue Hospital, where he was taken Wednesday after being shot by an NYPD officer in Midtown.

Baril was shot after allegedly hitting Officer Lauren O'Rourke with a hammer in the area of West 37th Street and Eighth Avenue. O'Rourke and her partner, Officer

Geraldo Casaigne, recognized Baril's photo, which had been distributed to all patrol officers. The man then attacked the officer after he realized he was being followed, Police Commissioner Bill Bratton said during a press conference on Wednesday. WJB

Transportation

Expect LIRR delays this weekend

Long Island Rail Road riders should expect significant service disruptions this weekend. No trains are running between Hicksville and Mineola because the Ellison Avenue Bridge in Westbury is being demolished. The outage is expected to affect 40,000 LIRR riders.

There are special timetables for all LIRR branches. Buses replace some of the trains, and other trains are being rerouted.

The MTA is urging riders to plan for an additional hour of travel time, and avoid the Ronkonkoma and Port Jefferson branches.

More information on the special schedule is available at www.mta.info or by calling 511 or 718-217-5477. METRO

Class action

Nail salon workers file lawsuit over wages

Two New York City manicurists on Thursday filed a proposed class action lawsuit claiming four nail salons routinely violated minimum wage and overtime laws, days after a New York Times investigation revealed rampant wage theft and hazardous conditions in the industry.

The lawsuit says employees at the salons, which have the same owners, are paid $60 or less for 10-hour shifts and are often denied breaks.

The lawsuit said the salons — Nailsway, Naulo Nails, Nailsmetic and Nailscure — violated state minimum wage law and a federal law requiring time-and-a-half pay for overtime and breaks. REUTERS

Train was accelerating before crash

Investigation. The probe continues into what caused the deadly Amtrak #188 crash.

In the final 60 seconds before Amtrak 188 derailed, the train accelerated from 75 mph to more than 100 mph, the National Transportation Safety Board (NTSB) reported Thursday evening.

However, no official cause of the crash or reason why the train accelerated has been determined, said NTSB board member Robert Sumwalt.

All equipment on the train is being examined for anomalies, but none have yet been detected, he said.

Newly identified among the dead on Thursday were Laura Finamore, 47, a Manhattan realtor, Italian businessman Giuseppe Piras, Derrick Griffith, the dean of student affairs and enrollment management at Medgar Evers College in Brooklyn and Bob Gildersleeve, an executive with a food-safety company, who was found in the train's wreckage on Thursday by a cadaver dog.

Previously identified as fatalities were Associated Press employee Jim Gaines, 48, New York resident and Philly tech CEO Rachel Jacobs, 39, U.S. Naval Academy cadet Justin Zemser, 20, and 55-year-old Wells Fargo VP Abid Gilani.

All 243 people aboard Amtrak 188 have now been accounted for, officials said Thursday.

The National Transportation Safety Board previously said that they determined the train was traveling at 106 mph in a 50 mph speed limit zone and that the engineer hit the emergency brake as the train took a left curve.

The NTSB will soon interview the train's engineer, Brandon Bostian, 32. Bostian's attorney, Philadelphia lawyer Robert Coggs, told ABC's "Nightline" that Bostian is "distracted" and cannot remember the derailment. Bostian suffered a concussion, leg injuries and a head wound requiring 14 staples in the crash, but he survived.

Future safety

- Amtrak has said it will install positive train control, technology that restricts train speed to speed limits, on all rails by the end of 2015.
- "Positive train control would have prevented this accident," Sumwalt said Thursday.

- Amtrak service from Philly to NYC and the Regional Rail's Trenton line are still discontinued.

Big shocker: The MTA is pretty filthy

Report. Subway cleaning and painting are not up to scratch, according to the city comptroller.

Next time you're on the subway, take a look around you. Notice peeling paint? Rats on the tracks? Tiles that need a good scrub?

The MTA's subway cleaning and maintenance is not up to scratch, according to a report released on Thursday by New York City Comptroller Scott Stringer's office.

"Fares keep going up, but anyone who takes the trains can tell you that we haven't seen a meaningful reduction in rats, garbage and peeling paint," Stringer said in a press release. "New York City Transit management needs to get its priorities straight [and] improve conditions underground."

The consequences of the lack of cleaning are not just unpleasant subway rides for New Yorkers — the report found that the conditions could also be contributing to more track fires and rat infestations. On top of that, the MTA is not meeting its own goals to fix peeling paint.

Between 2008 and 2013, the agency's spending on subway cleaning went from 6.3 percent to 5.4 percent of their revenue. Over this same period, their total revenue grew by 34 percent.

The report also found that the MTA cut its track-cleaning employees by almost 50 percent.

Iran navy fires shots at tanker as tensions rise in Gulf

Iranian naval vessels fired shots at a Singapore-flagged tanker in the Gulf on Thursday in what appeared to be the country's latest attempt to settle a legal dispute by force with a passing commercial vessel, U.S. officials said.

Around noon in the Gulf, five Iranian Revolutionary Guard Corps naval ships approached the Alpine Eternity, prompting the oil-products tanker to flee to safety in United Arab Emirates' waters, the officials said.

One U.S. official, speaking on condition of anonymity, said Iran had attempted to intercept the vessel in international waters because Tehran says

The incident signaled further escalation in tensions two weeks after Iranian patrol ships diverted a Marshall Islands-flagged container vessel from the Strait of Hormuz to settle a years-old debt case.

The Pentagon declined to say whether it would again order U.S. warships to accompany commercial vessels passing through the Strait of Hormuz, as it did after the last incident.

The U.S. Secret Service has pervasive problems and a deep-seated culture of fear and retaliation, U.S. lawmakers said on Thursday at a hearing to investigate how two senior agents drove a government car into White House

The agency has come under pressure this past year over a string of embarrassing allegations.

Honda adds to air bag recalls, global tally now around 36M

Honda recalled close to 5 million vehicles fitted with potentially faulty Takata air bag inflators, as investigations showed the problem behind one of the biggest auto safety crises may be more widespread than thought.

The latest move by Japan's third-largest automaker brings the overall global total of vehicles recalled for Takata-related air bags to around 36 million since 2008 and comes a day after Toyota and Nissan recalled 6.5 million vehicles worldwide.

Honda said it decided to recall the cars after finding some Takata bag inflators were not sealed properly. REUTERS

President Barack Obama sought to reassure Saudi Arabia and other Gulf allies of Washington's commitment to their security despite deep concern among Arab leaders about

Nepal earthquake death toll rises

Missing. Helicopters flew over eastern Nepal, and a team sent up a drone to search for US Marines' Huey chopper.

The death toll rose to 110 from the Himalayan country's second big earthquake in less than three weeks, according to the home ministry.

A Reuters correspondent flew on a Nepali military helicopter along the Tamakoshi River that runs by the town of Charikot, in the mountainous Dolakha district worst hit by Tuesday's 7.3 magnitude quake that has killed more than 100 people.

The river winds through rugged Himalayan terrain in an area whose tallest peak soars over 23,000 feet. Hillsides are cloaked with lush forest that would make it hard to sight the chopper that went missing after the crew was heard over the radio saying the aircraft had a fuel problem.

In Koshikhhet village, a two-man civilian team was using a drone to search for the missing Marine Corps UH-1Y, or Huey, as the model is better known, which was carrying six Marines and two Nepali soldiers.

"We are using infrared vision to look for hotspots and any signs of life," said drone operator Shepherd Eaton, from GlobalMedic, a Canadian aid agency that specializes in search and rescue. Eaton and his partner wore cowboy hats, T-shirts and jeans and worked with a Nepali army team that had a helicopter.

For the Lady Who Refuses to Be Ignored

Fragile meets fierce for a provocative watch inspired by the iconic trendsetters of the sixties!

They charmed. They wowed. They dared. The great beauties of the sixties did more than blaze trails in fashion, they created the road map for timeless style. Think Elizabeth, Sophia, Raquel, Marilyn, Audrey, and Bridgette. All these ladies had the ability to wear high fashion without it wearing them. Mini dresses. Cat eyeliner. Big hair. Nobody did it better.

These provocative and gorgeous game changers are the inspiration behind our Stauer Sirene Watch. Like them, our watch exudes both femininity and rebellion for an enticing juxtaposition few can resist. And, at only $95 the price is pretty irresistible too.

Flaunt the 104 sparkling European crystals gracing the rose gold-finished bezel and hour markers for a touch of romance. And the glossy black band with its crocodile pattern adds just the right amount of edge.

There's no doubt in an age of flux that these movie stars had perfect timing, as does our watch. Powered with precision mineral movement designed to get you to your next engagement right on time, even if that means fashionably late.

You don't need to be a fashion icon to wear the Stauer Sirene Watch, but it will sure turn you into one. Put it on your wrist and be the one to watch.

"Mad Max"'s real star

Charlize Theron

Even Charlize Theron was surprised when she got into "Mad Max: Fury Road" and learned her character, Furiosa, was the real star. "I remember when George Miller showed me the storyboard, I knew there would be an important female role, but as I started to turn the pages, I was in such shock. She is the one who carries the emotion of the script. I guess that is also what stuns the people who see the film. They expect Max to be the leader. But actually she is the one who shakes up the storyline with a haul on the wheel!"

Almost as shocking was what she did to her head: shave it. "Keeping my hair long would have looked weird," she says, laughing. "That was the only way I could see myself slipping into this underground, highly mechanical atmosphere, only surrounded by guys. That seemed impossible to do with a ponytail on my head. One day, I called George, and I suggested that we cut my hair. And he said OK! Three hours later, I was bald." MWN

Tom Hardy reveals the feminist side of 'Mad Max'

The "Mad Max: Fury Road" star explains why he's not actually the star

NED EHRLBAR
@Nedrick
ned.ehrbar@metro.us

It's taken 30 years to bring Mad Max back to the big screen. In the supercharged update, Tom Hardy steps in for Mel Gibson — and then just as quickly steps aside for co-star Charlize Theron. And for Hardy, that's just fine.

This isn't your dad's "Mad Max"

"Mad Max is not actually in the driver's seat in this movie," Hardy says. "It's about time you had better female leads in action movies. This is not a feminist argument, it's a person-hood situation. This is how we ought to reflect the times — not so much strong women, but just people. You know, you have a male and a female who are both just personhood situations on both sides of the gender. I wouldn't put it past George to come up with a transgender [hero]; do you know what I mean? He's not the type of person who's going to mince his words."

The apocalypse can be good for a laugh

"There's a sense of humor that George has, a certain fearlessness in the enjoyment of that postapocalyptic world, demented fun," Hardy says. "There's not just, like, good versus evil, you know, or 'The Road' or something like that where everything's just like devastatingly bleak, you know? It's a carnival, sort of a circus, sort of Vaudevillian. There is something almost Terry Gilliam-esque, Monty Python-esque, without banging the gong. There's almost a tongue-in-cheek delirium. Everything is designed as a sort of ghastly, grotesque humor."

The film has a strong feminist streak

"I think it's very smart of George to deliver a female lead. He's reflecting the times as well as pioneering at the same time," Hardy explains.

"It's no surprise to me that he would use a character that is synonymous with Mel Gibson — the silhouette, the icon of Mad Max — but it's clear right down to the shoulder pad on her left arm that [Theron] is the female protagonist. Charlize led this entire movie. One has to yield to that, because if you fight it, you get malleted."

"Workaholics" star Adam DeVine is back for more in "Pitch Perfect 2"

Not Denzel Washington
GETTY IMAGES

Adam DeVine didn't think much of "Pitch Perfect" initially. "Just because I'm generally ill-prepared and smoke too much weed, I thought the first one was a baseball movie when I went to the audition," he remembers. "I get there, and there's all these super-handsome dudes with abs in their cheeks, and they're all singing." Luckily, he knew what he was getting into for "Pitch Perfect 2."

Your character works as a campus security guard. Did you do any ride-alongs to prepare?

A campus security ride-along? [Laughs] The campus security part of the movie isn't that detailed. I basically just wear a T-shirt. I'm not really securing much. You don't delve into that backstory too deeply. But to answer your question, no. Not at all. I did make out with Rebel [Wilson] several times before just to see how well our lips worked together. That was our ride-along. She's a killer smoocher. That girl has big old full lips, like little pillows.

I'm sure she says the same about you.
I hope so.

You have a detailed Wikipedia page.

super-weird. When I first moved to L.A., I needed to have a bio, and I hadn't done anything besides a few high school plays and hosting a pep rally or whatever, so I just cut and pasted Denzel Washington's bio as a joke. So it was like, "Adam DeVine, star of 'Man on Fire' and 'Training Day,'" and then it said stuff like, "went to Fordham University, studied at the American Conservatory of Dramatic Arts in San Francisco." Everything else they caught eventually, but somehow the Fordham and American Conservatory stuff has stayed, so people think I'm, like, very well educated. [laughs]

But the part about you getting hit by a cement truck?

I was hit by a cement truck when I was a kid, yeah, and I couldn't walk for a couple of years. That was a huge turning point in my life. I'm glad it happened because I don't think my parents would've allowed me to move to L.A. when I was 18. They were all, "He almost died that one time. We can't say no to him."

According to that Wikipedia page, next month marks the 20th anniversary of the accident. What are you going to do to celebrate?

I need to celebrate with these legs — climb something, jump off things. Maybe I should get a cheap cement truck and blow it up. Happy anniversary, me!

'Mad Max: Fury Road' is an action lover's fever dream

MATT PRIGGE
matt.prigge@metro.us

George Miller had to wait 30 years to make a fourth "Mad Max" movie. The anticipation shows: "Mad Max: Fury Road" explodes in a relentless flurry of grease-stained automotive mayhem peppered with explosions, collisions, dudes flying about on bending sticks and reams of S&M duds. Max returns, now as Tom Hardy and this time with Furiosa (Charlize Theron), a one-armed warrior who's stolen a gaggle of young brides from a white-haired overlord.

Hardy, an actor who never likes to be too liked, happily hands the movie over to Theron, whose buzz cut opens up her face, allowing her to project a constant aura of vulnerability and concentrated badassery. But

Not only does "Mad Max: Fury Road" recast its hero from Mel Gibson to Tom Hardy, it gives more screen time to the female lead, robot-armed warrior Furiosa (Charlize Theron). WARNER BROS. PICTURES

Theron is still a pawn; the real star is Miller. Allowed to go back to his roots, especially after doing "Babe" and "Happy Feet" movies, he goes super-sized times 1,000. Still, it exhausts without tiring out, running as it does "only" two hours and taking just enough time for characters and a sly, angry feminist streak.

Well before it drops a left field Sonia Sotomayor joke, it's clear "Pitch Perfect 2," like its predecessor, isn't an Up With People pepfest, getting in our face and ear canals with shrilly-committed a cappella. It wants to be an earnest musical and a hypothetical live-action "Simpsons" episode. When the Green Bay Packers swing by for an all-star a cappella off, the strange brew is something else. It still succumbs to sloppy sequelitis. The plot doesn't make much sense, even for a winkingly slapdash affair. The film moves, be it through music or gags, though it could be more discerning with the latter. The first half has a comic verve, but it winds up both running out of steam and increasingly falling back on dumb, questionable jokes and old-school bad ethnic humor. "Pitch Perfect 2" is hugely likable, and often exponentially funnier than it ever had to be, but no movie that so wastes Katey Sagal can be all good. MP

'Slow West'

"Slow West" isn't your usual anti-Western. For one thing, it's roughly half a regular Western. Kodi Smit-McPhee plays Jay, a 16-year-old Scotsman who's come to the great Old West to locate his beloved. Luckily, he's picked up by Silas (Michael Fassbender), a cigarillo-chomping man with a name, and they must face off against, among others, a fur coat-rocking baddie (Ben Mendelsohn).

Kodi Smit-McPhee and Michael Fassbender head across the prairie in "Slow West." A24

Silas seems to have walked straight out of the Western genre itself, and it's the back-and-forth between myth and something weirder that gives "Slow West" its tension and unique voice. Its pitilessness is tempered by a goofy streak, which makes room for absurd diversions and sight gags. And it has a climax that works as both a deconstruction and a primo example of a classic shoot-'em-up set piece. Director John Maclean (formerly of The Beta Band) wants you to be conscious of genre tropes and bite your nails at the same time. You can watch it with your art-snob pals and with your Clint Eastwood movie-raised dad. MP

Rival Sons' quest for authenticity

Lead singer Jay Buchanan tells us why being in a rock band isn't about the girls, money or attention for him.

EMILY LAURENCE
@EmLaurence
emily.laurence@metro.us

Rival Sons' bluesy, pure rock 'n' roll sound has broad appeal, with fans ranging from hard-core rockers to hipster kids sick of listening to The Black Keys on repeat. But lead singer Jay Buchanan says he doesn't play for any of the hundreds of fans in the audience.

"I play for the band," he tells us. "Music is such an intense affair. There's so much energy swirling around onstage or in the studio. You have to serve the song first, and because that is so consuming, the audience is an afterthought."

Lightning in a bottle

The foursome is currently on tour promoting their album "Great Western Valkyrie," which came out last summer. "It was a difficult record to make because we did it at such an intense, frantic pace," says Buchanan.

The band purposely didn't write any of the songs until they were all in the studio together. "We go in there with nothing and then create a force," he explains.

"We capture that energy, an honest snapshot of that moment. That immediacy and energy is really a keystone for Rival Sons."

Wanting a reaction

To Buchanan, being a musician means being a storyteller. "People have always told stories through song, and the melody is a way for people to remember every detail — it's the candy coating of the message," he says. He scoffs a bit at artists who try to take away from that.

Learning to compromise

Buchanan started his music career as a solo artist, playing with Rival Sons on the side but went all in about seven years ago. "I've never allowed myself to compromise so much, ever," he says of being in a band. "But there's something so beautiful in collaboration. I would have missed out on so many beautiful, creative moments."

Authenticity remains the most important aspect to the singer. "When I'm making music or listening to music, I'm really just trying to find the truth," he says. "I'm just trying to find something that's going to make me feel something I didn't feel before."

Evolution in song

Jazz singer Esperanza Spalding introduces her alter ego.

LISA WEIDENFELD
@LisaWeidenfeld
lisa.weidenfeld@metro.us

Esperanza Spalding is trying out the jazz version of Beyoncé's Sasha Fierce. Her latest tour, based on her upcoming album, "Emily's D+ Evolution," is all about Emily, but don't ask her to quantify it too much. Asked if she would say Emily is a persona, she counters, "I wouldn't say anything. I wouldn't say. I wish people could see it first, and then they could talk about it."

But she is willing to elaborate on what Emily is. "It's like when you put on a play for your parents, with your friends. It's you, but you're playing other people. So there's a lot of other people, beyond the characters who are passively involved in the stories of each song, but I would say that Emily's the one who I'm pretending onstage to play. She's a version of me through which I'm pretending."

The album is Spalding's first since 2012's "Radio Music Society," for which she won a Grammy. If you're not familiar with her, you might remember the time she won a best new artist Grammy over Justin Bieber, and his fans were not pleased, to say the least. But with all that in the past, she's ready to focus on her new project, which she says "will hopefully come out this year."

She says that the Emily character isn't different from who she is. It is, after all, her middle name. "I was called Emily for a lot of my life by the people closest to me because no one wanted to go through the trouble of 'Esperanza.' So it reminds me of simpler questions and simpler answers to those questions."

Don't expect her to play too many of her older standards during this show, though she hasn't totally dropped her ear-

On being influential

Asked if she feels a sense of responsibility since she might be some people's entry point into jazz, she quickly demurs. "No, that just happened because a lot of my stuff isn't very jazzy, and I was younger and prettier than other artists, and we live in this beauty-centric, youth-centric culture. Young people are used to being fed that information through that medium of young and beautiful."

She goes on to explain, "Some people say that about me, and I appreciate why they do. Part of the reason, unfortunately, that young people who aren't into jazz like my music is probably because a lot of it doesn't really sound like jazz. But maybe if they would follow me into the realms of my life that are very jazz-based, they'd get exposed to some more real jazz. But maybe not."

lier work. "I do a lot of gigs still with all kinds of repertoire from previous projects, so it doesn't really feel like I'm leaving it aside. It's like if you were on a TV series and then you did a play. It's not really walking away from anything," explains Spalding.

Let's be more generous

Re: 'Moms need money' (Metro, May 13)

I believe that we must help all women. We need living wages and whatever assistance mothers need. While some moms on welfare spend money on drugs, etc., most don't. I live on disability, and it is very stressful to live on so little money, and welfare gives way less. This is so hurtful and unnecessary. Let's be generous in the same way that we are, unfortunately generous, with the military. Why spend trillions on a murderous war in Iraq, but not give moms and children what they need?

Instead of focusing our anger on moms on welfare, let's focus on changing the forces that make it so hard for most of us to live well. The powers that be want us to fight each other, instead of making this a society that cares for all of our people, not just the very rich.

Let's have programs for moms on welfare who want to work that offer good, high-paying jobs, and programs for those who have work but need more help. If moms, or dads for that matter, want to stay home with their kids, why not pay them?

There is a monetary value to society for the work mothers, and sometimes fathers, do at home.

Let's make this a society that is generous, relaxed and peaceful for all. SHIFRA FREEWOMAN

From fervor to focus

NHL. The Rangers don't have much time to celebrate their big Game 7 win.

When the tale is told and retold days, weeks, months, years, decades later, the yarn will be spun as a brilliant bit of coaching engineering.

The truth of the matter is that it was, in hockey parlance, "a bounce."

Derek Stepan won an offensive zone faceoff, the puck eventually finding its way onto Keith Yandle's stick. A quick pass to Dan Girardi, who fired a shot that ricocheted off of bodies. To Stepan alone in the left circle.

All it took was a mere snap of the wrist for Stepan's face to transform into a mask of exhilaration.

"It's a special feeling," Stepan said, a few short minutes after the Rangers reached the Eastern Conference Final for the third time in four years by besting the Capitals, 2-1, in overtime of Game 7 of the Metropolitan Division Final on his series-clinching goal.

The Rangers became the first team in NHL history to win a playoff series after trailing 1-3 in successive years. Last year, on their way to the Stanley Cup Final, the Rangers defeated the Penguins in Game 7 of the semis after losing three of the first

The slate

Upcoming Eastern Conference Final schedule:

- Game 1: Saturday at Rangers, 1 p.m., NBC
- Game 2: Monday at Rangers, 8 p.m., NBCSN
- Game 3: Wednesday at Lightning, 8 p.m., NBCSN
- Game 4: Friday, May 22 at Lightning, 8 p.m., NBCSN four games of the series.

"We've been through so many things over the last few years," said Henrik Lundqvist, who made 35 saves in winning his sixth Game 7. "I think it's important that you stay focused on the positives. [The Capitals] won three out of the [first] four but [they] were close games. That's important to know that you don't need to change much to win a game."

Up next will be an on-ice reunion with ex-mates Brian Boyle, Ryan Callahan and Anton Stralman and their Tampa Bay Lightning teammates in the Eastern Conference Final (Game 1 Saturday, 1 p.m. at MSG, NBC). Tampa Bay won all three regular-season meetings between the teams in the by an aggregate 15-7 margin.

MLB. Yanks, Mets look to maintain position

The Yankees and Mets are both clinging onto division leads in the middle of the season's second month.

The Yankees will be at Kansas City this weekend, facing a Royals team that also sits atop their respective division.

Michael Pineda is scheduled to get the ball for the Yankees on Friday with C.C. Sabathia set for Saturday and Nathan Eovaldi ready for Sunday.

The Mets, meanwhile, will continue their home series against the basement-dwelling Brew-

Patriots fight back

As expected, Tom Brady filed an appeal of his four-game suspension Thursday. The Patriots also created a website, titled "The Wells Report in Context" in which it refutes many theories in the document. "The conclusions of the Wells Report are, at best, incomplete, incorrect and lack context," the lengthy response reads.
